were unquestionable. Within the same period, a gentleman of this city saw a girl of 17 hung in London for stealing a silver cream pitcher. Edward dent, or Vaile Brown was hung in Boston for burglary committed in the house of Captain Osias Goodwin, in Charter street, and stealing therefrom sundry articles. I once owned a set of the Old Bailey Trials, (1775, 1825,) embraced in a series of perhaps 58 quarto volumes. The carliest of these volumes containing the details of the trial of the unfortunate Dr. Dodd, for forgery, whose THE FIRS ANNUAL SESSION OF THIS touching appeal for mercy, here recorded, was fruitle-ly enforced by the splendid eloquence of Johnson. In a later volume, long after the commencement of the present century, eight separate capital convictions are recorded as one day's job of a single tribunal, the culprits being all boys and girls between

One case I remember of peculiar judicial atrocity. A young girl of 17 was indicted for stealing a roll of ribbon, worth three The prosecutor's testimony was to this effect: The prisoner came into my shop and bought some ribbon. I saw her secrete this piece also. I personally knew gether. As we reached the corner of a street mal and moral culture of the youth of both leading to the Bow street office, I turned toward it. She said she was going in another direction, and bade me good morning; said to her. No! you are going with me! I saw you stead a piece of my ribbon! She immediately implored me for God's sake to overlook it, and restored to me the article. I said to her that I had lost many things in this way, and was resolved to make her an example—that I was determined to have her life!' and he got it. I can never forget how my blood bedled as I read the testimony of this cold-hearted wretch. In view of the judgment of a merciful God, far rather, it cemed to me, would I have been in the place of that poor, frail, erring girl, even on the scaffold, than in the place of her heartless accuser. I rose from the pecusal of these volumes borror-struck with the continuous record o unconceivable legal cruelty. It appears to me that the 70,000 hangings in the reign of Henry VIII, were matched by an equally long list of persons condemned to be hung in the reign of George III. Since that time much has been done in England by Romilly Brougham, McIntosh and Sidney Smith, and lanthropists on this side of the Atlantic.

* True Heroism.

The following aneedote, extracted from unpublished memoirs of a French nobleman, may, it is hoped, serve as an example, well worthy of being imitated by all who desire ship, honor and sensibility. Years succeeded years, and no quarrel had ever disgraced fessed against him.

Their attachment, when, one unfortunate It is further ordered, That the Clerk of this their attachment, when, one unfortunate evening, the two friends, having indulged rather freely in some excellent burgundy, repaired to a neighboring hotel, and engaged n a game of backgammon. Fortune declared herself in favor of the marquis; he won every game, and in the thoughtless glee of the moment, laughed with exultation at his unusual good luck. The count lost his temper, and once or twice upbraided the marquis for enjoying the pain which he had excited in the bosom of his friend. At last, upon another fortunate throw made by the marquis, by which he gammoned his antag-omist, the infuriated count threw the box and dice in the face of his brother soldier. Every gentleman present was in amazement, and waited, almost breathlessly, for

"Gentlemen," said the marquis, "I am a Frenchman, a soldier and a friend. I have received a blow from a Frenchman, a soldier and a friend. I know and acknowledge the in visiting with vengeance the author of my disgrace. But, gentlemen, the heart of that man is entwined with my own, our educatian was the same, our principles are alike, and our friendship dates from our earliest years. But, Frenchmen, I will obey the aws of honor and France; I will stab him or in my own way, if there remains in this room one Frenchman who dares to doubt my resolution to resent even an improper amile, my sword is by my side to punish an affront, but not to murder my friend, for whom I would die, and who sits there a monument of contrition and bravery, ready with me to challenge the rest of the room to deadly combat if any man dare to think amiss of this transaction."

We read the following clip from one of our exchanges as coming from the pen of the late Mr. Prentice. We could not pass it by without remark. No, anything so touchingly beautiful from its highly-gifted author would make us do homage to that soul divinely touched with the inspirations of the immortal future; and though it may have been scarred in its conflicts with Passion. yet the Divine flashed out in its power and beauty, even to the last of its struggles on the shores of Time:

bled to and fro among the topmost boughs of the heart, and filling the whole air with such joy and gladness, as the songs of birds do when the summer morning comes out of darkness, and day is born on the mountains. We have all possessions in the future, which we call "sometime." Beautiful flowers and singing birds are there, only our hands sel-dom grasp the one, or our ears hear the other. But oh, reader, be of good cheer, for other. But oh, reader, be of good cheer, for all the good there is a golden "sometime;" GOODSPEED'S EMPIRE 18 - 14 PUBLISH-when the hills and valleys of time are all ING HOUSE, Cincinnati, St. L. als, New Orpassed; when the wear and fever, the disappointment and sorrow of life are over; then there is the place and the rest appointed of God. Oh, homestead! over whose roof fall no shadows or even clouds, and over whose threshold the voice of sorrow is never heard; built upon the eternal hills and standing with the spires and pinnacles of celestial beauty among the palm-trees of the city on high, those who love God shall rest under thy shadows, where there is no more sorrew nor pain, nor sound of weeping "sometime."

should be so foolish as to throw up stones GOOD TIMBER LAND FOR SALE. and clubs into trees to knock down the truit; if they would let it alone it would fall of itself. The second is, that men should be so foolish and wicked as to go to war and kill one another; if they would let one another alone they would die of themselves. And the third and last thing which I wonder at most of all is, that young men should be so unwise as to go after the young women; if they would only stay at home the young women would come after them.

How to Speculate Successfully--Telephone State of the BY A Member of the N. Y. Stock Exchange.

Pamphlet Contains some sensible advice on the value as it is based upon common sense principle which an experience of many years as a min-ber of the Gold Board and New York Siril You are hereby cited to be and appear at a regular Term of the Chancery Court aforesaid, to be holden in the Chancery Court room, in the city of Jackson, on the Third Monday in October, A. D., 1872, on the first day of the term, then and there to show cause, if any you can, why the final account of J. L. Carter, Administrator of said estate, should not be allowed, and he be discharged.
